

Linn County Fair adds general admission concert seating

ALBANY — Due to an outpouring of early reserved seating ticket sales, the Linn County Fair is adding nearly 800 general admission seats to the concert venue for nightly concerts beginning Thursday.

The additional chairs mean there will be almost 1,300 reserved and general admission seats.

Blanket seating will not be allowed.

“The Marion County Fair had an outstanding turnout and vendors report sales were brisk,” said Randy Porter, Linn County Fair & Expo Center director. “We think this is a prudent move to help reduce potential crowding. We want everyone to have room to relax and enjoy the concerts.”

Porter said 447 reserved seats are already sold out for the Blue Oyster Cult concert at 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

“We have been looking forward to hosting the county fair for some time,” Linn County Commissioner Roger Nyquist said. “We hope that this additional seating is a step toward ensuring folks have the great time they are used to at the fair.”
